The High Road Middle Academy of Washington, DC, specializes in serving middle school–aged students facing learning difficulties. As part of a larger network of schools comprising one of the leading specialized education companies in the country, our school puts over two decades of experience to work on behalf of our student body every day by applying a custom-designed program that highlights the specific strengths of each student and targets their particular needs.

All of the integral components of this customized program skillfully and successfully educate and reach special needs children, like our small classroom sizes, our one-on-one instructional approaches, our leading-edge teaching methodologies, and our school-wide behavioral management system that both promotes personal accountability and maintains the supportive, structured, positive learning environment in which our students thrive. At all times, we place great emphasis on core academic skills, employing a wide array of interactive materials and computerized tutorials to fully engage students on their own level, at a comfortable pace; and we supplement our comprehensive academic program with any and all services that further emotional and social growth, such as our multifaceted transitional life skills curriculum, speech/language and occupational therapy, and psychological counseling.

The High Road Middle Academy is wholly committed to advancing the scholastic skills of our students, preparing them for a productive and fulfilling young adulthood, and, ultimately, improving the quality of their lives.
